

What Is The Climate Like?

Written by Administrator

Monday, 11 August 2008 15:14 - Last Updated Monday, 23 January 2012 14:53

Being equatorial, East Africa has fairly constant temperature year round with rains historically coming in April/ May and November/ December, although this has varied over the last few years. The coastal areas are reverse with dry summer and wet winters. Inland areas have relatively low humidity and temperature drops as altitudes climb, while Coastal areas are usually hot and humid.